

South Street Head House Square District

South Street speaks of the everyday people of the continuing American revolution. Artists and craftspeople moved in during the 60's and 70's and recreated a workplace and market reminiscent of the 1700's. The shops today remain, a bit more settled perhaps, but still unconventionally imaginative and creative. From fine restaurants to delis and take-outs, art galleries, tattoo parlors, professional offices and every kind of retail store under the sun, South Street's nearly 300 businesses make every day and every visit a happening.
